“ What I remember the most about him in the brief moments we spoke over the past 10 years is his passion in whatever topic crossed our conversation and his connection to so many people. Best described as a whatever-it-takes-to-get-the-job-done and loving people kind of guy in that wild man, bubbly persona that made for the life that was Josh Hammock. At the apex of all these connections was family. I never knew a time around him when he wasn't talking about them or in the process of doing something for them. In his family's recent move into a new home, no one could imagine that he would be getting the ultimate upgrade so soon. He's rejoicing now having been a friend to so many, He is now with the One closer than a friend. Prayers and condolences to the family.

“ A lot people have kindness in their hearts, but very few act upon it. This is what set Josh apart; his actions. Josh was assigned to my division at the fire department for the past year. The love and kindness he showed for total strangers was a rare thing for this world and a true pleasure to witness. His desire to help people was contagious and, literally, limitless. No matter how impossible a person's situation, Josh always did what he could to make their life better.

I got to hear Josh's end of he and Paige's phone conversations while we'd be out driving around Birmingham. Just by the way he spoke to her, the tone of his voice, I could tell they were best friends. So many times they'd end their conversation with a laugh. Anytime he spoke of his wife, it usually was to say that he was lucky and that she was the best. I can honestly say that Josh was grateful for their life together, because I heard him say the words on more than one occasion.

I am overseas right now and will not be back in time for the service, but my heart is broken today. Josh was my friend and a great man. I plan to honor him by doing what he did in life. I will be kind to strangers, be the best father I can be, and love my wife with all my heart.

“ I remember when Josh was my partner at northstar ambulance. He was always making me laugh and would take money outta his pocket to help anyone in need. I remember he would get my opinion on how to propose to Paige and wanting it to be special. He left us way to soon. RIP Josh!!!
