I'd appreciated it if you'd refrain from posting on my son's memorial wall...Will didn't know you very well and what he recalled is how mean you were to him as a little boy.

“ I'd like to share with everybody how Will had such a talent for music. One of the things we really bonded over was music and playing songs together. One of his favorite songs to play with me was Echo & the Bunnymens “ the killing moon” . He loved that song and always had a good time singing and playing it. He played mainly by ear but was really quick to pick up any song really. I love this guy so much! He really helped me through one of the hardest times of my life just by hanging out with me. He always made me laugh. This is the last pic he sent me about two weeks ago. I was teasing him by asking him if he was going for the Trent Reznor look. I can't even begin to explain what a huge chunk of my heart is now missing. I love you so much Will.

“ I am so so sorry for your loss. It is heartbreaking to lose a loved one , but even more difficult when your loved one is so young.

I lost my mom February 28. I will not say I know how you feel as your loss is grieving at a whole different level. He is young. He is your grandson. He is gone too soon. And having lived in your household will be a constant reminder of how much you miss him.

As time goes on, the big hole in your heart will be VERY slowly touched with good memories. You may partially smile but will definitely feel sadness. There are not enough words to offer consolation to make you feel better.

It will take a long time for you and Sandra to heal. You will be surrounded by other loving grandchildren. You will have to lean on each other to stay strong.

I will add your grandson to my prayer list. Be strong. Stay safe.

Hugs

I love Will truly and deeply. I always will. I only knew him for ten months, but they were the best months of my life. He was with me through many hardships I faced and I could not have coped without him by my side. He was kind, caring, hilarious, and the most loveable person I will ever meet. I will never meet anyone like him again. He was honestly one of a kind and he will always hold half of my heart.
